Linda Hadley joined the firm as a partner in 2017 after decades of private practice in Hartford with Krasow, Garlick & Hadley, LLC. She represents financial institutions and corporate entities in commercial and consumer litigation ranging from complex foreclosures and construction disputes to evictions and adversary proceedings in Bankruptcy Court. She has been described as practical and pro-active and she is known for providing personal attention to her clients. Linda also provides regulatory advice and guidance on lender liability issues, and has defended numerous cases brought against Connecticut community banks and finance companies.

Throughout her career, Linda has provided counsel to lenders on complex loan transactions, loan sales and workouts. She has also represented developers and retailers in commercial leasing. Linda has also handled complex mergers and acquisitions both within the financial services industry and in connection with corporate entities and Fortune 500 companies. She has represented creditors in Bankruptcy matters of all types. She enjoys tackling difficult legal issues and provides a refreshing perspective coupled with a depth of experience.

Linda has tried a number of cases in Connecticut courts and has successfully argued many appeals in the Connecticut Appellate Court. She regularly participates in alternate dispute resolution which often results in favorable results without the need for protracted litigation. Mindful of client budgets, Linda will work with clients to control fees and costs while zealously seeking a positive outcome. She regularly assists clients in preparing for regulatory audits and provides advice on best practices and procedures for lenders engaged in collection and foreclosure matters.

Linda is often asked to speak on subjects relating to default litigation, regulatory updates and lender liability issues. She enjoys golf, yoga and reading fiction in her spare time.
